GRIFFEY

FOR CIRCUIT

JUDGE

2022

Paid for by Griffey for Circuit Judge, Col. James C. Harding, USAF Ret., Treas.

Above, Bethel University graduate and now Station Camp High School teacher Dylan Nash previously traveled with BU Global Studies Director Stacie Freeman as a student. He returned this year with students of his own to continue the investment Freeman began in him. Right, Jai-Chandler Mathis conceived of the mural depicting the work of Rescue Center Costa Rica for both residents and volunteers from around the world to see and enjoy. The Bethel University Global Studies group led by Dresden's Stacie Freeman (not pictured because she was behind the camera) included students from Dresden High School. They and others from Gallatin, Tennessee spent spring break following Mathis' guidance to paint the vivid scene. Artists of the moment included — Left Group, Front Row (L to R): Mark Maddox, Jacey McClure, LeeAnne Morefield, Austin Miller and Haley Brooks. Left Group, Back Row: Mark McClure and Dylan Nash. Right Group (L to R): Hallie Hall, Patti Vinson, Mathis and Kristen Childress.

Dresden Students Travel to Costa Rica with Bethel Global Students

When Stacie Freeman saw the destruction the December tornado caused in her hometown of Dresden, one of her first thoughts was to cancel the March trip to Costa Rica she'd planned for students at Dresden High. As the director of Bethel University Global Studies program and a sociology professor who provides dual enrollment classes for Weakley County Schools, she weighed the cost of the travel against the loss of the cultural experience and, initially determined the local needs were too great.

"Why would we travel to Costa Rica to volunteer when our own home is in ruins? Why would we go clean habitats at an animal rescue center when our own streets are littered with debris?" she asked in a letter she soon sent to friends and family.

She then answered her own question, "These students have already lost too much. COVID has upended their high school experience, they've recently lost two coaches and mentors to illness and disease, and now this ... a literal uprooting of their lives. I don't want to add this once-in-a-lifetime opportunity to the list of things they've lost. However, I also don't want it to take away from efforts/resources to rebuild our hometown."

The letter to past donors, global studies alumni, and her personal network of friends and family was the first outreach in several months of fundraising that eventually covered most of the costs of five DHS participants who had signed up for the March 19-24, 2022, trip. Whereas most high school and college students who opt to join her excursions to locales like Colombia, Ecuador and Costa Rica usually fund raise themselves to pay their program fees, Freeman made it her goal to ease that burden for the Dresden representatives who had "lost homes, churches, neighborhoods, and/or jobs."

As a result of her efforts, a total of more than $6,000 was donated, netting the student who lost nearly everything in the tornado complete funding and covering 75% of the others' expenses.

"The students and I have been amazed," she said. "They can't believe the support and love they've received from people they've never met."

The DHS group included Haley Brooks, Mark Maddox, Jacey McClure, LeeAnne Morefield and School Resource Officer Kristen Childress. Childress served as the team's photographer. Dresden High alum and now Bethel University's graphic designer Jai-Chandler Mathis, Mark McClure and Patti Vinson also accompanied the group. Additional travelers from Station Camp High School in Gallatin rounded out the team who collectively helped accomplish United Sustainable Development Goals as they worked with non-profit partners Rescue Center Costa Rica. They put in a combined 244 hours in support of ending illegal wildlife trade by caring for the animals and completing a mural for the center. Mathis conceived of and mapped out the mural that featured the animals seen at the center. Students and adults completed the painting before they concluded their five-day trip. In all, their service had an economic impact of $7654 in the host community.

Morefield, who had previously participated in mission trips but was on her first volunteer experience out of the U.S., expressed gratitude for the support the group received and the opportunity to then support others.

"I was very grateful, especially being affected by the tornado. It showed me how much people actually see you and how much they're willing to support you and how much they care," she explained. "I knew I was going to work hard.... I didn't look at it like 'oh I get to go to Costa Rica and it's going to be so much fun.' The main thing was going to volunteer. Seeing everyone who was behind me did make me want to do it a little bit more; it gave me a bit more of a push."

In addition to the work of caring for the animals and painting the mural that covered an outside wall, the group participated in multiple culturally immersive, authentic, educational experiences including a hike through the jungle to a waterfall, a tour of a family-owned coffee farm, and a day at the beach.

Morefield reflected on how what seems exotic to the traveler is a part of everyday life for the resident.

"My favorite part was being immersed into the culture. They speak Spanish. They eat different foods. And all the variety of animals that we saw in the shelters, we then saw healthy ones in the wild. And that's what they get to see every day," she recounted.

The multi-cultural aspect was not limited to interactions with Costa Ricans. Brooks noted that she was glad to have worked alongside fellow volunteers at the rescue facility who were from other countries.

"This trip gave me the opportunity to experience what it means to be a global citizen by immersing myself in Costa Rican culture, meeting people from all around the world including Norway, Canada, England, Sweden, and Denmark, and contributing to 244 hours of volunteer work at the animal rescue center. This trip was very impactful," she shared upon her return.

McClure also referred to the trip expanding her cultural awareness. "I've come back knowing how to connect with people of other cultures and help communities outside my own."

In addition to the intrinsic benefits of travel, the DHS seniors also earned three hours of college credit at Bethel, are eligible for the President's Volunteer Service Award, and may apply their service hours toward the TN Scholars requirements.

Maddox considers the time away a worthy investment, adding, "The trip to Costa Rica with BU Global Studies was life changing. The bonds I created with the people on the trip will last for a lifetime. I thoroughly enjoyed the entire experience. I wouldn't have preferred to spend my spring break any other way."

Freeman began offering global opportunities to area high school and university students in 2011. Since then, she has taught and led more than 400 travelers who, in turn, have contributed in excess of 28,000 hours of service in countries like Vietnam and Cuba. Prior to her recent Costa Rican trip, she took a group to Colombia. In June she will introduce students from Greenfield and Dresden along with Bethel University alumni and students to Ecuador.

"Gaining a new perspective is such a gift, a great return on your investment," she noted of the rewards of global studies. "This trip was evidence of that in so many ways. Donors invested to ensure those who lost so much in the Dresden tornado didn't lose one more thing. Those Dresden representatives, in turn, invested in Costa Rica and came home with a deeper understanding of what they can do in the world. What a win/win!"

William Carroll

Our County's Namesake

This morning as I scrambled to find a topic about Carroll County, my topics were few and far between based on level of interest. What came to mind was how I knew little to nothing about Carroll County's namesake, Governor William Carroll. So guess what, this week's article is a biographical sketch of the late governor.

Carroll was born near Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania on March 3, 1788. He was the oldest son of the nine children of Thomas Carroll, a merchant. As a child, Carroll received a limited education that emphasized practical fields like book-keeping, surveying, mathematics, English language and grammar, and probably farming and rudimentary military training. The majority of his education came from working in his father's hardware store and other mercantile ventures.

In 1810, Carroll made the move to Nashville. He was given a letter of introduction from Albert Gallatin, Secretary of the Treasury to Thomas Jefferson and James Madison, to Andrew Jackson. This led to his establishment of a hardware store and nail factory. The success of these businesses put him at the forefront of the town's development throughout the 1810s.

At the outbreak of the War of 1812, Carroll was appointed captain of the Nashville Uniform Volunteers and joined Andrew Jackson's Creek campaign. Within a few months, he had been promoted to major and took part in the Battle of Talladega in November 1813. For his actions in this battle, he was promoted to colonel.

In 1813, Carroll became involved in a quarrel with another Jackson subordinate, Jesse Benton, that culminated in a duel on June 14 of that year. Jackson initially tried to defuse the quarrel, but, unsuccessful, he agreed to be Carroll's second. In the duel, Carroll lost part of his thumb, and Benton was shot through the hip, but both survived. Benton's older brother, Thomas Hart Benton, was enraged after hearing Jackson had supported Carroll, and would later injure Jackson in a brawl in Nashville over the incident.

Carroll was wounded at the Battle of Horseshoe Bend in March 1814. After the battle, he returned to Nashville to recruit troops for the defense of New Orleans. When Jackson resigned from the militia to accept a commission in the federal army, Carroll was elected major-general of the Tennessee militia. Traveling via the Cumberland, Ohio and Mississippi rivers, his new troops arrived in New Orleans just before the British invasion. At the Battle of New Orleans on January 8, 1815, Carroll's troops fought near the center of Jackson's line, where some of the most intense fighting occurred.

In 1816 Carroll purchased the General Jackson, the first steamboat on the Cumberland River. The next year, he and other leading merchants attempted to bring a branch of the Bank of the United States to Nashville. When the legislature blocked this effort, he was named to the board of directors of the newly created Bank of Nashville.

Carroll's business ventures prospered until the financial Panic of 1819 when he was forced into bankruptcy. While ruined commercially, he launched his political career. The panic promoted a huge resentment of state run banks. This sentiment was true with Carroll especially with the Bank of Nashville as planters and land speculators led by John Overton controlled the banks and suspended specie payment (the redemption of paper money or coin by banks or the Treasury), to the detriment of debtors and small farmers. This led to the development of two political factions based on banking.

In 1821, Carroll emerged as the ideal candidate to oppose the Overton faction. Carroll's supporters presented him as a poor man standing against the pretensions of the wealthy. In promotional circulars, Carroll declared himself "no friend of banks" and speculated that "we would . . . have done better, if we had never seen one in the state." Still, he rejected radical proposals to abolish the banks because "their sudden downfall would be ruinous to the interest of the people."

He favored compelling the banks to resume specie payments, with continued supervision over future operations. The moderately conservative approach differed little from that of his opponent, Colonel Edward Ward, who proposed the consolidation of Tennessee's banks into one central institution. Carroll's image as a self-made man ruined by the panic, however, contrasted sharply with Ward's image of a well-educated son of inherited wealth. Carroll defeated Ward by a more than four-to-one margin.

The majority of Carroll's first term in office was working toward repairing the State's budget and banking practices. At Carroll's insistence/persuasion, the legislature passed a law compelling the banks to resume specie payments by April 1824. Later, the date was moved back to September 1, 1826. In 1825 the assembly repealed a prohibitive tax on banks operating in Tennessee without a state charter, and with Carroll's support, the Bank of the United States finally opened a Nashville branch the next year.

The Tennessee State Constitution limited the length of gubernatorial terms to no more than six years in an eight-year period, forcing Carroll's retirement in 1827. This led to the election of Sam Houston, who resigned in April 1829.

Carroll was eligible to run for governor in 1829 and won the first of another three consecutive terms. During the next six years, the assembly funded internal improvements, established a penitentiary and mental hospital, reorganized the judicial system, and revised the penal code. Tennessee established new banks that provided the state's financial system until the Civil War.

Carroll predicted Andrew Jackson's rise to national prominence, but he was hesitant to commit himself fully to Jackson's presidential prospects. He believed that Jackson lacked the experience and reputation necessary for a serious run for President of the United States. He and Jackson also had opposing views on federal banks and the exclusive specie currency.

Despite his lack of confidence in Jackson, he did agree to serve as campaign treasurer for the 1824 election. Jackson won a plurality of the popular vote in the 1824 election but lost the presidency to John Quincy Adams after the House of Representatives voted in what was known as the "Corrupt Bargain." He had also supported and advised Henry Clay in the 1824 election (who became Secretary of State under Adams after removing his name for consideration as president). Carroll actively supported Jackson's successful candidacy in 1828 and re-election campaign in 1832.

He worked to ingratiate himself with Jackson, as the President was aware of Carroll's lack of faith and duplicity. By the early 1830s, he was back in Jackson's good graces and regained a foothold in the leadership of Jackson's forces in Tennessee. Carroll went on to endorse Martin Van Buren, Jackson's hand-picked successor, in the 1836 presidential election.

An 1834 convention revised Tennessee's 1796 constitution, but it retained the previous limitations on the governor's term of office. Carroll attempted to remain in office for a fourth term claiming he was eligible for a first term under the new frame of government but former congressman Newton Cannon defeated the incumbent.

Following the loss, Jackson appointed Carroll as an Indian commissioner to conclude negotiations for the Cherokee removal, and in 1838 President Van Buren appointed him a special agent to the Creeks. Critics charged that Carroll used these positions to enrich himself through illicit land speculation.

Despite Democratic encouragement, Carroll never again stood for public office after his 1835 loss. By the early 1840s, his health had declined significantly, and he died at his Nashville home in 1844. He is interred at Nashville City Cemetery.

HUNKER DOWN WITH KES

Spreading Peanut Butter, Jelly.....And Hope

It's tough going off with a bunch of Christian folks... when you are the only heathen in the group! They didn't hesitate for a second to jump on an airplane and take off. To Guatemala of all places!

They went to build houses, host medical clinics, distribute food and lift spirits in some fairly impoverished areas of that little Central American country. I went along to see the Mayan ruins and eat some fresh avocados.

Robby and Norman purported to be in charge. But little Debra told everybody what to do! We flew into Guatemala City and headed for the mountains! Before I could get a glimpse of the first mounds of an earlier civilization we were divided into teams, prayed over and dispersed to our specific assignments.

I'm telling you, these people didn't waste no time getting "about the Father's business!"

Tracey and Chaka headed up the medical team. I'd never seen people work like they did. They examined older Guatemalans, middle aged ones, little kids...all day long! They didn't take a break; they didn't go to the bathroom; they didn't look around; they didn't eat their carefully prepared peanut butter and jelly sandwiches made for our lunch.

They just took care of the needs of one person after another.

I saw the elderly, skinny gentleman come in while Cathy was busy passing out toothbrushes, bath cloths and various health products to the adults as they exited the makeshift clinic. I knew this old guy would steal her heart...

She took one look and grabbed her "carefully prepared" PB and J sandwich and rushed over and gave it to him. While he was still thanking her, she gave her other sandwich to his friend.

It gets worse! Katerina, who is young enough to be my granddaughter, gave HER sandwiches away. Gomer, who doesn't even go to our church, gave away HIS sandwiches. People, I didn't have much breakfast. I'm soooo hungry I could eat the left hind leg of a jersey bull!

I reluctantly joined in with the giving. But my heart—and my stomach—wasn't shouting hallelujah and jumping pews like the others.

It took "some doing" for this team to find a job I could handle. While Brian, Robby, Pastor Eli, Steve, Tommy, Gomer, Jennifer, Norman and Debra were off building houses, I was passing out toys to every Guatemalan child I could find.

One of those toys was a Frisbee. Wait a second! My heart finally jumped a pew! "Cathy, do my work for a few minutes. Me and my new amigo here are going outside."

By the time I showed him how to spin that thing out of his hand, 27 more amigos had gathered around. The game was on! I couldn't speak one word of Spanish, but I could interpret the smiles. And the laughter. And the pure joy.

I was pushing Amigo 4 out of the way as I leaped over him to catch a high one from Amigo 13...when Amigo 6 cut my legs out from under me. These guys picked this game up quick as a wink. And they played like it was the seventh game of the World Series.

Just like kids are supposed to!

Thousands showed up the next day. I had to break out the soccer ball. And realized I was going to need a lot more sandwiches!

Talk about a great trip! Everybody else was doing mission work while I gave away their lunches and played with the young people...

And this team—if you don't count me—was extraordinary. Jennifer and Denise were from Monroe, Georgia. They just heard we were going and got on the plane. Steve joined our church one Sunday and went on this trip the next. How's that for getting involved.

Shanna and Denise got a "day at the spa" at one of the building sites. The kids gave them a "makeover" that included braided hair, smeared on lipstick and a light snack of gummy bears that had rolled around on the dirt floor. That's a little more "missionarying" than I could have done!

Jennifer gave away her overalls. Tommy was rock steady on this trip, cooking breakfast, cleaning up, doing whatever it took... Eli led devotions in the morning, worked all day, prayed for us at night. I believe he did sleep a few minutes on one Wednesday evening.

Gomer has been a missionary in West Africa for the past 17 years. He gets a month off to come home—and he signed up for this trip. He's either crazy or that's Lottie Moon/Jim Elliot type stuff...

At night, when we all should have been in bed, these people would have meetings—I kid you not!—it about drove me nuts!—to discuss how they could better help the Guatemalan people.

It was always about the people.

Serving them. Touching them. Sharing Christ with them.

I got so caught up watching these missionaries, marveling at their over-the-top love for folks they didn't know and most likely would never see again, I forgot to visit a Mayan ruin and I didn't take one bite of a fresh avocado.

And I can tell you for dead certain positive, I will never look at a peanut butter and jelly sandwich in the same way again...

Respectfully,
Kes

SUDOKU WEEK 14

Level: Beginner

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

See solution in next week's edition.

Carroll County Sheriff's Reports

Vehicle Theft — Charlotte Ann Winberry, 39, of 7405 Highway 70, Cedar Grove, was charged with theft over $10,000 and under $60,000 after allegedly trying to steal county-owned vehicles on March 27.

According to the report by Deputy Steven Scott, he responded to the impound at the Carroll County Highway Department after receiving a call about a suspicious vehicle. Upon arrival, Scott observed vehicles in a field behind the impound lot and a person in dark clothing near one of the vehicles, but that person was gone by the time Scott got to the vehicles, which the deputy identified as a Ford F350 dump truck and a Ford F150 work truck, both belonging to the Highway Department. Scott also observed a silver Nissan Versa about 300 yards away from the other vehicles. Both the Versa and the dump truck appeared to be stuck in the mud. Scott found Winberry in a wooded area about 75 yards from the county vehicles. Winberry told Scott that a male individual (who was not named in the report) had taken the trucks from the Highway Department and that she and this person had taken off running when the deputy arrived. The combined value of the two county vehicles was estimated at over $51,000.

Stolen Vehicle — Deputies are investigating the recent theft of a vehicle from private property in Huntingdon.

Deputy Frank McGee reported that a white 2015 Mitsubishi Mirage was stolen during the early morning hours of March 27 from 400 Abbott Lane. The vehicle was valued at $11,500.

Multiple Charges — Andrew Howard Hilgar, 65, of Jean, Nevada, was charged with aggravated assault, felony evading, resisting arrest, and speeding following a March 27 police pursuit.

According to the report by Deputy Steven Scott, he tried to pull over a vehicle driven by Hilgar after clocking the vehicle at 68 mph in a 55 mph zone on Highway 70. Hilgar, however, did not pull over and continued for about three miles until he ran over a tire deflating device set out by law enforcement and then crashed his vehicle into a wood fence inside Huntingdon city limits. Hilgar put his vehicle in reverse and rammed the front of Scott's patrol car and accelerated, moving the patrol car back about seven feet before officers removed Hilgar from the vehicle.

License Violation — Eddie Winston Horton III, 52, of 1132 Main Street, McKenzie, was charged with driving on a suspended license during a March 26 traffic stop near McKenzie.

Deputy Cody Coleman reported that he pulled over a vehicle driven by Horton due to a license plate display violation. A computer check showed that Horton's license was suspended with two prior violations.

Household Hazardous Waste Mobile Collection Available in Weakley County

NASHVILLE — The Tennessee Department of Environment and Conservation (TDEC) mobile household hazardous waste collection service will be in Weakley County on Saturday, April 9.

Tennesseans are encouraged to bring household hazardous waste – including cleaning fluids, pesticides, batteries and more – to a designated drop-off location. A person does not need to live in the county to participate.

The drop-off location is Weakley County Convenience Center, 608 County Maintenance Rd., Dresden, 8 a.m.-NOON. The contact is Michelle Nichols at (731) 364-6798.

“We are pleased to provide this opportunity to dispose of household hazardous waste properly,” Commissioner David Salyers of the Tennessee Department of Environment and Conservation said. “We want to make it as convenient as possible for Tennesseans to demonstrate their commitment to protecting the environment.”

Since the program’s inception in 1993, more than 360,000 Tennessee households have properly disposed of more than 23 million pounds of material. There have been over 1,400 one-day collection events.

Household hazardous waste materials are considered flammable, toxic, reactive and/or corrosive and should not be placed with regular garbage. Typical items to dispose of include cleaning fluids, pesticides, mercury thermometers and thermostats, fluorescent lamps, lithium and button batteries, aerosols, adhesives, medications, brake fluid, swimming pool chemicals, paint thinner and used needles in sturdy containers. Items not accepted include ammunition, explosives, alkaline batteries, paint, electronics, and any empty containers that should be disposed in normal trash. There is no cost or appointment necessary for household hazardous waste collection.

While household hazardous waste may be disposed for free, there is a cost for disposal of Conditionally Exempt Small Quantity Generator Waste (i.e. wastes from non-household sources such as businesses, schools, farms, churches, etc.) An appointment is also necessary. Call (615) 643-3170 to request a price quote and schedule an appointment.

Many counties and municipalities meet the needs of local residents by providing collection of batteries, oil, paint, antifreeze and electronic scrap – or BOPAE, as it is sometimes called. When handled correctly, these BOPAE materials are minimally hazardous, but inappropriate for collection at household hazardous waste events. Tennesseans are encouraged to contact their local city or county solid waste department to find BOPAE collection sites in their area.

When transporting materials to the site, place containers in sturdy boxes lined with newspaper or plastic to prevent spills and cross-contamination in the trunk of a car or back of a truck. Be sure to keep materials away from children and pets.

For more information on the household hazardous waste mobile collection service, please call (800) 287-9013 or visit this TDEC link.

Milan No-Till Field Day is Back, In-Person for 2022

MILAN — After going virtual in 2020, the Milan No-Till Field Day, sponsored by the University of Tennessee Institute of Agriculture, will be in person in 2022. This will be the 32nd year for the field day, promoting no-till farming to areas prone to erosion and soil loss. The event is Thursday, July 28, at the UT AgResearch and Education Center at Milan.

Along with the in-person event, the 2022 No-Till Field Day will have a virtual component. The No-Till website will feature presentations from researchers and partners on topics including no-till farming, the latest research and variety trials for Tennessee’s most prominent crops, forestry, and more.

“We saw a huge success with the 2020 Virtual No-Till Field Day,” said Blake Brown, the director of the AgResearch and Education Center at Milan. “With that in mind, we decided a virtual component would be helpful to those who can’t make it to Milan for the field day or can’t make it to all of the tours, but we are really excited to be hosting the event live and in-person again this year.”

The Milan No-Till Field Day originally began in 1981 as a way to teach local producers the benefits of no-till farming versus traditional tillage. Tours through fields at the research center focused on planter set up, weed control, and cover crops.

Now, the field day has turned into the largest in the nation devoted to conservation tillage, bringing thousands of people to Milan. As no-till farming is now the most prominent type of farming in Tennessee, tours focus on the latest technologies and research in the industry and how those new technologies can be integrated into a no-till system.

The UT AgResearch and Education Center at Milan is located at 3A Ledbetter Gate Road, Milan, Tennessee. Sponsorships and exhibitor spots are currently being offered. Contact LesLee Smelser at 731-686-7362 for more information.

Phipps Pharmacy Honored for Service During Waverly Floods

ALEXANDRIA, VA — The National Community Pharmacists Association announces Phipps Pharmacy in Tennessee has earned the 2022 NCPA Innovation Center Excellence Award for Best Community Engagement. This is the fifth year of the NICE Awards competition, which was created to recognize pharmacies for their efforts to enhance their value, promote their services, and better serve their communities. The NICE Awards are sponsored by RedSail Technologies, LLC.

On Aug. 21, 2021, a flash flood struck in Humphreys County, Tenn., taking the lives of 20 residents and displacing more than 500 families. Phipps Pharmacy had recently purchased a pharmacy in the town of Waverly, which has a population of about 4,000. In the weeks that followed, pharmacy staff provided more than medicine. The day after the flood, Phipps Pharmacy president and CEO Jay Phipps and his family purchased two pallets of drinking water and toiletries from a local retailer and headed to the pharmacy to assess need. As patients came, staff gave whatever supplies the families needed or served as a resource to help find aid. They spent hours on the phone with insurance companies for emergency overrides, listening to stories, and providing hugs. They coordinated 17 donation drop-off locations across middle and west Tennessee, including the other three Phipps Pharmacy locations. They also worked with local vendors to make and sell “Humphreys County Strong” merchandise, with the proceeds donated to flood victims.

Jay Phipps reached out to numerous colleagues and suppliers and received support from the pharmacy community across the state and nation. Reflecting on everything that has happened since August, he says, “The most impressive thing is the overwhelming unity after the flood. It gave us some hope and we saw some real humanity.

People stepped up. I’m proud of our staff and the pharmacy profession. Giving of yourself to help others and give them hope. That’s what it’s all about.”

“For the last five years the NICE Awards have showcased the best in independent pharmacy’s efforts to make patient experiences better and more rewarding,” says NCPA Innovation Center President Kurt Proctor. “The Phipps Pharmacy team was creative, fast-moving, and followed their hearts in helping their community respond to and carry on after extreme flooding. For these efforts, they’re very deserving of our special Best Community Engagement NICE Award. We are glad to recognize Jay Phipps and his colleagues and applaud them for their generosity and hard work.”

Phipps Pharmacy was established in 2000 and has locations in Huntingdon, Jackson, McKenzie, and Waverly. Its products and services include standard retail; medication therapy management; COVID-19 antibody testing, immunizations and vitamin B-12 injections; compounding services including compounded bi-identical hormone therapy, veterinary, dermatology, and low-dose naltrexone; and medication adherence services through its Phipps Pack compliance packaging.
